this book chronicles the progression of civic education advocacy since the early 2000s it identifies the main actors that called for civic education reform describes their motivations and policy platforms and documents the path taken to capture state policy agendas it argues that no child left behind incentivized civic education advocates to mobilize a call to action to restore emphasis on civics that materialized into national policy reform proposals that successfully captured the agendas of state legislatures and bureaucracies this book analyzes the implementation and sustainability of these civic education policy reforms by undertaking a comparative case study analysis of school districts in utah and connecticut through the voices of teachers and district administrators the book tells the story of what happened when these state policy reforms inspired by national initiatives hit the local level where the rubber meets the road as ideological debates about schools and democracy unfold across the country as civic education advocates and proposals proliferate this book treats civic education not as panacea but as a concrete policy area to be analyzed and understood it contextualizes the current debate and offers a critical assessment of the most recent comprehensive state level civic education policy reform it argues that while questions linger about what type of civic inspired educational interventions remains most effective for whom where and why the implementation of such interventions are profoundly impacted by local actors and local politics and that future initiatives should take this dimension into consideration why do more people vote or get involved in other civic and political activities in some communities than in others why we vote demonstrates that our communities shape our civic and political engagement and that schools are especially significant communities for fostering strong civic norms much of the research on political participation has found that levels of participation are higher in diverse communities where issues important to voters are hotly contested in this well argued book david campbell finds support for this view but also shows that homogenous communities often have very high levels of civic participation despite a lack of political conflict campbell maintains that this sense of civic duty springs not only from one s current social environment but also from one s early influences the degree to which people feel a sense of civic obligation stems in part from their adolescent experience being raised and thus socialized in a community with strong civic norms leads people to be civically engaged in adulthood campbell demonstrates how the civic norms within one s high school impact individuals civic involvement even a decade and a half after those individuals have graduated efforts within America's high schools to enhance young people's sense of civic responsibility could have a participatory payoff in years to come the book concludes thus schools would do well to focus more attention on building civic norms among their students this volume highlights the work of educators involved in school university community collaborations focused on civic education it addresses the decline in high quality civic education and low civic engagement among young people showcasing various projects aimed at enhancing civic knowledge and public engagement
